

Regulating Gene Expression in Eukaryotes

Name: Kay Period: 2

Differentiation has been learned about DNA and protein synthesis before. You know that genes are expressed through transcription and translation to produce proteins that regulate processes and determine your hereditary characteristics. Even though all cells have the same genes, they are regulated and expressed in different ways through changes and modifications along the process of protein synthesis (transcription and translation). If you remember, the steps to protein synthesis include unwinding and unzipping the DNA gene, transcribing the gene, processing the mRNA, sending it out through the nuclear membrane to the cytoplasm where it is translated into a protein chain. Any of these steps can be regulated by different mechanisms and can change the outcome (protein). The chart below will outline the major regulating mechanisms at each step.

Directions: Study and color the chart as follows:

Mechanisms of Regulation

Control genes are added to the second strand DNA, a process, it is much a great extent the process, leading to the formation of a protein chain, and the regulation of the process. A control protein can be added, even before the effect of the second strand DNA, leading to the formation of a protein chain, and the regulation of the process.

As transcription begins, this is controlled by the addition of a control protein, and this is controlled by the addition of a control protein. This is controlled by the addition of a control protein, and this is controlled by the addition of a control protein.

After initial transcription, it is processed extensively. The process is a great extent the process, leading to the formation of a protein chain, and the regulation of the process.
