Books in Print
Supplement, 2002 Encyclopedia of Biodiversity, 2013-02-05 The 7 volume Encyclopedia of Biodiversity Second Edition maintains the reputation of the highly regarded original presenting the most current information available in this globally crucial area of research and study It brings together the dimensions of biodiversity and examines both the services it provides and the measures to protect it Major themes of the work include the evolution of biodiversity systems for classifying and defining biodiversity ecological patterns and theories of biodiversity and an assessment of contemporary patterns and trends in biodiversity The science of biodiversity has become the science of our future It is an interdisciplinary field spanning areas of both physical and life sciences Our awareness of the loss of biodiversity has brought a long overdue appreciation of the magnitude of this loss and a determination to develop the tools to protect our future Second edition includes over 100 new articles and 226 updated articles covering this multidisciplinary field from evolution to habits to economics in 7 volumes

The editors of this edition are all well respected instantly recognizable academics operating at the top of their respective fields in biodiversity research readers can be assured that they are reading material that has been meticulously checked and reviewed by experts Approximately 1 800 figures and 350 tables complement the text and more than 3 000 glossary entries explain key terms Biodiversity Conservation and Land Degradation Neutrality Sanjay Singh,Mukesh K.

Gautam,2025-06-18 This book highlights various issues related to biodiversity conservation and land degradation and the global challenges faced in achieving land degradation neutrality It then discusses the importance of ecosystem restoration as a pivotal strategy in solving these issues Ecosystem diversity and its health directly influence land productivity and its range of ecosystem services Achieving land degradation neutrality is crucial for restoring and reinforcing biodiversity s structure and function which ultimately plays vital role in building climate resilience To substantiate these ideas this book presents practical case studies and exemplifies best practices in plant animal and ecosystem conservation It prominently highlights the intricate interplay of complex drivers behind land use land use change and land degradation It also examines the direct consequences of land degradation on biodiversity and explore global efforts frameworks and strategies crucial for achieving land degradation neutrality Furthermore it integrates indigenous knowledge policy framework and community engagement as instrumental components for achieving global targets related to sustainable land management This book accentuates the significance of terrestrial ecosystems in achieving biodiversity goals outlined in SDG 15 Life on Land through a multidisciplinary approach and contributions from academicians policymakers United Nations Organizations and subject matter specialists Thus it is a resource for students trainees and researchers providing them with knowledge and insights about significance of land degradation land degradation neutrality and biodiversity conservation Agroforestry for biodiversity and ecosystem services Donald Mlambo,Yashmita Ulman, Pedro Álvarez-Álvarez,Sangram Bhanudas

Chavan,2025-06-18 Agroforestry farming systems with trees has been practised for millennia across the world but its significance as a relevant part of land use has not been formally recognized As global food demand continues to increase farmers are increasingly relying on intensive use of existing croplands and land clearing resulting in environmental degradation This degradation includes the loss of biodiversity and vital ecosystem services that support human well being However recent discourses suggest that unlocking the potential of agroforestry could offer a solution to this pressing challenge By harnessing agroforestry we have the opportunity to support biodiversity in agricultural landscapes improve agricultural productivity and livelihoods and provide numerous ecosystem services such as nutrient retention erosion control carbon sequestration pollination pest control and fire risk reduction Agroforestry encompasses a wide spectrum of practices including natural vegetation remnants Taungya hedgerows windbreaks home gardens forest farming riparian buffers fallow areas silvopasture and alley cropping By exploring these diverse agroforestry systems worldwide we can better understand the comprehensive range of ecosystem services they offer One of the greatest challenges faced by humanity in the

Anthropocene is to reconcile biodiversity conservation with the demands of economic development which often involves converting forestland to other land uses Globally forest conversion and unsustainable management practices in agricultural landscapes are driving the loss of biodiversity and ecosystem services Recent research has advanced our understanding of the potential of agroforestry as a solution to environmental degradation highlighting the need to unlock its potential to achieve both local and global sustainable development goals However scientific evidence on the impacts of agroforestry on biodiversity and ecosystem services is not yet universally available To upscale agroforestry practices it is crucial to gather field based evidence that demonstrates the benefits of biodiversity conservation through agroforestry This evidence will support informed decision making by farmers advisory services and policy making bodies Therefore this issue aims to present information and evidence from various regions of the world shedding light on the diverse services provided by agroforestry and how these systems are being utilized in the current era of climate change and sustainable development

Stressors in the Marine Environment

Martin Solan, Nia Whiteley, 2016-03-10 A multitude of direct and indirect human influences have significantly altered the environmental conditions composition and diversity of marine communities However understanding and predicting the combined impacts of single and multiple stressors is particularly challenging because observed ecological feedbacks are underpinned by a number of physiological and behavioural responses that reflect stressor type severity and timing Furthermore integration between the traditional domains of physiology and ecology tends to be fragmented and focused towards the effects of a specific stressor or set of circumstances This novel volume summarises the latest research in the physiological and ecological responses of marine species to a comprehensive range of marine stressors including chemical and noise pollution ocean acidification hypoxia UV radiation thermal and salinity stress before providing a perspective on future outcomes for some of the most pressing environmental issues facing society today Stressors in the Marine Environment synthesises the combined expertise of a range of international researchers providing a truly interdisciplinary and accessible summary of the field It is essential reading for graduate students as well as professional researchers in environmental physiology ecology marine biology conservation biology and marine resource management It will also be of particular relevance and use to the regulatory agencies and authorities tasked with managing the marine environment including social scientists and environmental economists
