Abstract Background: Learning and health behaviors among adolescents are multifaceted in nature, and only a better understanding of their social and environmental determinants can help to design effective interventions. Methods: We conducted a cross-sectional survey of 1,000 adolescents in a high-income country, using a validated questionnaire to assess their knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors related to learning and health. Results: The majority of adolescents (80%) reported that they had sufficient knowledge about learning and health. However, only 40% reported that they had sufficient attitudes and behaviors related to learning and health. Conclusions: The results of this study suggest that adolescents in a high-income country have sufficient knowledge about learning and health, but their attitudes and behaviors need to be improved. Keywords: Learning, health, adolescents, knowledge, attitudes, behaviors.
