

1. RCA2 can be useful in health care because:

- (A) It holds people accountable for their actions.
- (B) It helps to identify system failures that can be corrected.
- (C) It helps to assess the potential risk of introducing a new idea or process.
- (D) All of the above: B

RCA2 makes health care safer by focusing on systems failures and improving processes. It does not blame individuals for their actions and is not a method for enforcing accountability. It is not a method for assessing the risk of introducing a new idea or process.

2. Mr. Reynolds, a 75-year-old man, recently suffered from a wrong-site surgery. An RCA2 team is exploring what happened. They consider characteristics of the patient and staff members. According to Charles Vincent, what other areas should they consider?

- (A) Team factors
- (B) Work environment
- (C) Institutional context
- (D) All of the above: D

The best answer is all of the above. A wide range of factors influence medical outcomes. Charles Vincent lists seven categories these factors, including: patient characteristics, task factors, individual staff member characteristics, team factors, work environment, organizational and management factors, and institutional context.

3. Which of the following scenarios would most likely call for RCA2?

- (A) An occupational therapist quits after only three days on the job.
- (B) A physician is convinced that there is a better way to deliver pain medications on her unit.
- (C) A social worker catches a patient who is falling out of bed.
- (D) An administrator needs to develop a balanced budget.: C

RCA2 is important to address adverse events as well as near misses, such as the near-fall in answer choice C, that indicate a potential for harm to patients. Although the other options may represent opportunities for improvement, they are not indicative of an imminent threat to patient safety and would not trigger RCA2.
