Michigan's Venice Daniel F. Harrison, 2024-04-16 A chronicle of a unique waterscape and how its inhabitants navigated claimed and reshaped the region Few maritime landscapes in the Great Lakes remain so deeply and clearly inscribed by successive cultures as the St Clair system a river delta and lake found between Lake Huron and the Detroit River The St Clair River and its environs are an age old transportation nexus of land and water routes a strategic point of access to maritime resources and in many ways a natural impediment to the navigation of the Great Lakes From Indigenous peoples and European colonizers to the modern nations of Canada and the United States this work traces the region's transformation through culturally driven practices and artifacts of shipbuilding navigation place naming and mapmaking In this novel approach to maritime landscape archaeology author Daniel F Harrison unifies historiography linguistics ethnohistory geography and literature through the analysis of primary sources material culture and ecological and geographic data in a technique he calls evidence based storytelling Viewed over time the region forms a microcosm of the interplay of environment culture and technology that characterized the gradual shift from nature to an industrial society and a built environment optimized for global waterborne transport Basic Reference Sources Margaret Taylor, Ronald R. Powell, 1990 A perennial favorite invaluable as a learning tool I highly recommend it PREVIEW Portraits of the Earth Timothy G. Feeman, 2002 Every map is a tool a product of human effort and creativity that represents some aspects of our world or universe This course was powered by the belief that by exploring the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps students would see how mathematics could help them to understand and explain their world from the Preface Portraits of the Earth exemplifies the AMS's mission to bring the power and vitality of mathematical thought to the nonexpert It is designed to teach students to think logically and to analyze the technical information that they so readily encounter every day Maps are exciting visual tools that we encounter on a daily basis from street maps to maps of the world accompanying news stories to geologic maps depicting the underground structure of the earth This book explores the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps a topic that is rarely discussed in undergraduate courses It is the first modern book to present the famous problem of mapping the earth in a style that is highly readable and mathematically accessible to most students Feeman's writing is inviting to the novice yet also interesting to readers with more mathematical experience Through the visual context of maps and mapmaking students will see how contemporary mathematics can help them to understand and explain the world Topics explored are the shape and size of the earth basic spherical geometry and why one can't make a perfect flat map of the planet The author discusses different attributes that maps can have and determines mathematically how to design maps that have the desired features The distortions that arise in making world maps are quantitatively analyzed There is an in depth discussion on the design of numerous map projections both historical and contemporary as well as conformal and equal area maps Feeman looks at how basic map designs can be modified to produce maps with any center and he indicates how to generalize methods to produce maps of arbitrary surfaces of revolution Also included are end of chapter exercises and laboratory projects Particularly interesting is a chapter that explains how to use MapleR add on software to make maps from geographic data points This book would make an excellent text for a basic undergraduate mathematics or geography course and would be especially appealing to the teacher who is interested in exciting visual applications in the classroom It would also serve nicely as supplementary reading for a course in calculus linear algebra or differential geometry Prerequisites include a solid grasp of trigonometry and basic calculus RWaterloo Maple Inc Ontario Canada

Invisible Residents Ivan T.

Sanderson, 2005 This book is a groundbreaking contribution to the study of the UFO enigma originally published over 30 years ago In this book Sanderson a renowned zoologist with a keen interest in the paranormal puts forward the curious theory that a oeOINTS Other Intelligences live under the Earth's oceans This underwater parallel civilization may be twice as old as Homo sapiens he proposes and may have developed what we call space flight Sanderson postulates that the OINTS are behind many UFO sightings as well as the mysterious disappearances of aircraft and ships in the Bermuda Triangle What better place to have an impenetrable base than deep within the oceans of the planet Yet if UFOs or at least some of them are coming from beneath our oceans or lakes does it necessarily mean that there is another civilization besides our own that is responsible In fact could it be that since WWII a number of underwater UFO bases have been constructed by the very human governments of our planet Whatever their source Sanderson offers here an exhaustive study of USOs Unidentified Submarine Objects observed in nearly every part of the world He presents many well documented and exciting case studies of these unusual sightings more
