Guernsey, 1814-1914 Rose-Marie Crossan,2007 First scholarly study devoted to Guernsey in the nineteenth century as it changed from a francophone to an anglophone society In the early nineteenth century despite 600 years of allegiance to the English Crown a majority of Guernseymen still spoke a Franco Norman dialect and retained cultural affinities with France By the eve of World War I however insular society had turned predominantly anglophone and was culturally orientated towards England In examining this sea change the author focuses particularly on the role of migration since the Island experienced both substantial outflows to North America and the Antipodes and substantial inflows from Dorset Devon Somerset Hampshire and Cornwall the Irish province of Munster and the French départements of La Manche and Les Côtes du Nord The author investigates push and pull factors influencing the various migrant cohorts and evaluates the reception they met from the insular authorities and population at large Whilst showing that both British and French migrants in their different ways advanced the process of anglicisation she sets their contribution in its proper perspective against the host of less tangible forces which had first initiated anglicisation and were hastening it on irrespective of the migrant presence
