This edited book emerges from the observation that the current literatures on migration in China are constrained by a series of shortfalls including a relative topical homogeneity centred on domestic labour migration relatively narrowly conceived and institutionalist conceptions of migration and migrants without adequate attention paid to the identities agencies and everyday experiences of migrants and finally a lack of engagement with theoretical models and paradigms in the broad discipline of migration studies Assembling eight fine grained research works engaging with a broad variety of migratory trajectories and experiences this book addresses these shortfalls by 1 investigating diverse forms of domestic and transnational migration in and to China 2 problematising rethinking and innovating well established analytical tools and categories to move beyond their epistemological fixity and highlight their socially and dynamically constructed nature and 3 underscoring the centrality of identity subjectivity and everyday experiences rather than mechanical causality between institutions and migration outcomes to theoretical understandings of migration in China It will be of interest to researchers and advanced students of Sociology Politics Human Geography Social Work and Urban Studies This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies The City after Chinese New

homeowners with more than 70 per cent of urban residents owning homes higher than many developed countries This book shows how China's spectacular housing success is not shared by all social groups with rapidly rising housing inequality and residential segregation increasingly prevalent in previously homogeneous Chinese cities It focuses on the two extremes of the residential landscape and reveals the stark contrast between low income households who live in shacks in so called urban villages and the nouveaux riches who live in exclusive gated villa communities Over four parts the contributors look at the degree to which inequality affects Chinese cities and the extent of residential differentiation housing for the urban poor and in particular housing for migrants from rural China housing for the rapidly expanding Chinese middle class and the new rich and finally governance in residential neighbourhoods Housing Inequality in Chinese Cities presents theoretically informed and empirically grounded research into the polarized residential landscape in Chinese cities and as such will be of great interest to students and scholars of Chinese studies urban geography urban sociology and urban studies Handbook of Welfare in China B. about the significance of the African presence in Guangzhou and presents an invaluable case study for understanding particular modes of transnational mobility More broadly it challenges forms of re presenting and producing knowledge about subjects on the move and it transforms existing theorisations and critical understandings of mobility and its shaping power Through an ethnographic approach the book brings us closer to a number of practices features and objects that while characterising the lives of Africans in Guangzhou are also evidence of the interplay between individual aspirations and the structural constraints embedded in contemporary regimes of transnational mobility Raising critical questions about ways of un belonging in the precarious settings of neoliberal modernity and the future of African mobilities this book will be of interest to scholars of transnational African and Chinese Studies

Yang, 2020-11-22 This book sheds light on the mega city region development in China as a new form of urbanization which plays a crucial role in the economic development of the country. It examines the challenges faced by the mega city regions and opens up avenues for debates and further research. Economic reform of 1978 has led to an unprecedented growth in the population and economic development of China. A large portion of this increased urban population and the corresponding economic growth has been concentrated in the mega city regions such as Beijing Tianjin Hebei BTH Yangtze River Delta YRD and Pearl River Delta PRD. These three mega city regions have less land but more people and thus higher economy resulting in various issues and challenges faced by these regions. These challenges pertain to the socio economic development transport environment governance and development strategy which this book explores through case studies of Guangdong Hong Kong Macao Greater Bay Area Beijing Tianjin Hebei and Wuhan. This book also explains and analyses the economy migration processes transport development environmental conditions and governance of the mega city regions of China. With an overview of China's rapid urbanisation and the consequent economic growth, this book provides an essential understanding of related issues in order to establish appropriate strategies and policies to sustain the process of mega city region development.

Chinese in Africa Obert Hodzi, 2020-05-21 Chinese in Africa explores the complexities of identities and forms in which the Chinese Migrants in Africa express their Chineseness. In its study of the Chinese diaspora in Africa, the book eschews tendencies to compound the Chinese by showing their distinctiveness in terms of history culture identity and adaptation mechanisms. It pushes beyond the boundaries of ethnic and cultural homogenisation based on a perceived Chinese physiognomy. The diversity and hybridity of the Chinese identity and expressions of Chineseness explored in this book's seven chapters is essential to making sense of the historical and contemporary people to people engagements in Africa China relations. Empire of Silver Jin Xu, 2021-02-23 A thousand year history of how China's obsession with silver influenced the country's financial well being global standing and political stability. This revelatory account of the ways silver shaped Chinese history shows how an obsession with white metal held China back from financial modernization. First used as currency during the Song dynasty in around 900 CE, silver gradually became central to China's economic framework and was officially monetized in the middle of the Ming dynasty during the sixteenth century. However, due to the early adoption of paper money in China, silver was not formed into coins but became a cumbersome weighing currency for which ingots had to be constantly examined for weight and purity, an unwieldy practice that lasted for centuries. While China's interest in silver spurred new avenues of trade and helped increase the country's global economic footprint, Jin Xu argues that in the long run silver played a key role in the struggles and entanglements that led to the decline of the Chinese empire      Human Rights Education in China Weihong Liang, 2022-04-25 The book provides new research highlighting perspectives perceptions and practices regarding human rights and human rights education in China It traces the emergence and evolution of the human rights conception and human rights education from comparative perspectives China s deeply embedded philosophical and cultural traditions shed light on its ideas of human rights and human rights education The efforts to construct an independent and strong nation state since the mid to late nineteenth century fashioned the Chinese thinking of rights and citizenship and the reciprocal relation between the individual and community state With the help of collected data the book unpacks that the goal making and content selection of human rights education in China rely heavily on the provisions given by central authorities however the practices have different facets depends on how the people perceive and respond those requirements in the school and classroom contexts The book concludes by explaining the human rights education in China as a socialization project for citizenship making and suggests that China s doctrine on human rights and human rights education is closely associated with cultural relativization and social construction Though China is just beginning to develop human rights education in its education systems this study suggests possible direction for future research How to live with human rights should be included further in schooling especially how to infuse human rights education into all aspects of school day to day life      Rural Migrants in Urban China Fulong Wu, Fangzhu Zhang, Chris Webster, 2013-08-15 After millions of migrants moved from China s countryside into its sprawling cities a unique kind of informal urban enclave was born villages in the city Like the shanties and favelas before them elsewhere there has been huge pressure to redevelop these blemishes to the urban face of China s economic vision Unlike most developing countries however these are not squatter settlements but owner occupied settlements developed semi formally by ex farmers turned small developers and landlords who rent shockingly high density rooms to rural migrants who can outnumber their landlord villagers A strong state matched with well organised landlords collectively represented through joint stock companies has meant that it has been relatively easy to grow the city through demolition of these soft migrant enclaves The lives of the displaced migrants then enter a transient phase from an informal to a formal urbanity This book looks at migrants and their enclave villages in the city and reveals the characteristics and changes in migrants livelihoods and living places Using an interdisciplinary approach the book analyses how living in the city transforms and changes rural migrant households and explores the social lives and micro economies of migrant neighbourhoods It goes on to discuss changing housing and social conditions and spatial changes in the urban villages of major Chinese cities as well as looking into transient urbanism and examining the consequences of redevelopment and upgrading of the villages in the city in particular the planning regeneration politics of development and socio economic implications of these immense social economic and physical upheavals      Urban China The World Bank; Development Research Center of the State Council, 2014-07-29 In the last 30 years China s record economic growth lifted half a billion people out of poverty with rapid urbanization providing abundant labor cheap land and good infrastructure While China has avoided some of the common ills of urbanization strains are showing as inefficient land development leads to urban sprawl and ghost towns pollution threatens people's health and farmland and water resources are becoming scarce With China's urban population projected to rise to about one billion or close to 70 percent of the country's population by 2030 China's leaders are seeking a more coordinated urbanization process Urban China is a joint research report by a team from the World Bank and the Development Research Center of China's State Council which was established to address the challenges and opportunities of urbanization in China and to help China forge a new model of urbanization The report takes as its point of departure the conviction that China's urbanization can become more efficient inclusive and sustainable However it stresses that achieving this vision will require strong support from both government and the markets for policy reforms in a number of areas The report proposes six main areas for reform first amending land management institutions to foster more efficient land use denser cities modernized agriculture and more equitable wealth distribution second adjusting the hukou household registration system to increase labor mobility and provide urban migrant workers equal access to a common standard of public services third placing urban finances on a more sustainable footing while fostering financial discipline among local governments fourth improving urban planning to enhance connectivity and encourage scale and agglomeration economies fifth reducing environmental pressures through more efficient resource management and sixth improving governance at the local level
