

Regulating Gene Expression in Eukaryotes

Name: Kay Period: 2

Differentiation has been learned about DNA and protein synthesis before. You know that genes are expressed through transcription and translation to produce proteins that regulate processes and determine your hereditary characteristics. Even though all cells have the same genes, they are regulated and expressed in different ways through changes and modifications along the process of protein synthesis (transcription and translation). If you remember, the steps to protein synthesis include unwinding and unzipping the DNA gene, transcribing the gene, processing the mRNA, sending it out through the nuclear membrane to the cytoplasm where it is translated into a protein chain. Any of these steps can be regulated by different mechanisms and can change the outcome (protein). The chart below will outline the major regulating mechanisms at each step.

Directions: Study and color the chart as follows:

Mechanisms of Regulation

Control genes are added to the actual coding DNA, a process, it is much a great extent the function, leading to the production of proteins and the regulation of gene expression. Control genes are added, even though the effect of regulating up that DNA, leading to more accurate transcription, DNA is usually a must for specific gene expression.

As transcription begins, this is controlled by histones that bind to the gene and DNA, it is transcribed within the DNA system. There are many ways of controlling this process, a histone and histone. The histone, which is a nucleosome, is called histone. The histone, which is a nucleosome, is called histone. The histone, which is a nucleosome, is called histone.

After initial transcription, it is processed extensively. The process is a way that the DNA code is processed. The process is a way that the DNA code is processed. The process is a way that the DNA code is processed. The process is a way that the DNA code is processed.

The mRNA is then put through the cytoplasm, where it is translated. The mRNA is then put through the cytoplasm, where it is translated. The mRNA is then put through the cytoplasm, where it is translated. The mRNA is then put through the cytoplasm, where it is translated.

During translation, regulatory proteins (enzymes) are added to the mRNA. During translation, regulatory proteins (enzymes) are added to the mRNA. During translation, regulatory proteins (enzymes) are added to the mRNA. During translation, regulatory proteins (enzymes) are added to the mRNA.
