Lectures Ecclesiastical History Centuries Classic:

Lectures on the Ecclesiastical History of the First and Second Centuries (Classic Reprint) Frederick Denison Maurice, 2018-01-13 Excerpt from Lectures on the Ecclesiastical History of the First and Second Centuries These Lectures have never been delivered any where When my connexion with King s College ceased I was asked by a kind friend to authorize the publication of the notes which some of the students had taken down from my lips He was aware that my Lectures were extempore and that I had no reports Of my own by which I could correct theirs Nevertheless he fancied that he should be able to trace my meaning and to present it in an intel ligible form to the reader he even insisted that I should leave the matter wholly in his hands an arrangement to which except for his sake I willingly consented About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Dawley, 1999-11-11 In the days when New York City's most populous area was below Fourteenth Street what is today the oldest theological seminary of the Episcopal Church enrolled its first students at St Paul's Chapel Founded in 1817 before a decade had passed the Seminary moved to the woods and fields of Clement Clarke Moore's country estate just north of the town in Chelsea There its stone buildings soon became a familiar landmark The General Seminary still occupies that site now Chelsea Square on the lower west side For a hundred and fifty years its life has been intimately interwoven not only with that of the Episcopal Church but also with the changing scene of New York City Dr Dawley's history of the Seminary begins with the circumstances leading to its establishment by the General Convention and describes the experimental years of the new institution when there were few precedents to guide the pioneering venture Much of the subsequent story is told in biographical vignettes giving the reader vivid glimpses of a continuing community of men teachers and students priests and candidates for the ministry who strove to fulfill in their successive generations the vocation to which they were called Chapters deal with the ministry and theological education in the early nineteenth century old New York and its churches the growth of the Seminary its years of crisis and controversy the development of the theological curriculum and the story of the institution during the recent years of change The theological community in Chelsea today is a landmark not only of the long history of the Seminary but also of the Church's determination to remain close to the inner city that has become an urgent frontier of Christianity in the contemporary world At a time when reform in theological education is believed to be essential to any effective program for the renewal of the Church the experience of the past recaptured in these pages may be both enlightening for the present and instructive for the future
