— LEICA PRADOVIT PC

The integrated interface of the LEICA PRADOVIT PC makes direct projector control possible via the RS232 interface of a PC. When a modern lap-dissolve unit is used, its advantages can be used to their full extent. The P-COM protocol known from LEICA PRADOVIT RT projectors is also employed in a reduced form in the LEICA PRADOVIT PC. Of course, the Pradovit PC can be used for single projection.

— It makes no difference whether glass mounts or regular slide mounts are used in a slide presentation, the intelligent autofocus can differentiate them and quickly adjusts the sharpness to them. When the autofocus function is not required (in lap-dissolve presentations, for instance), it can easily be switched off.

LEICA PRADOVIT PC and IR projectors are perfectly matched to the demands of serious photographers. In addition to the features that are typical of Leica projectors, the two new models offer functions that make them unique in their class. The robust body with its die-cast aluminum base is an extremely secure protection for the precision mechanisms and the electronics of the projector.

The serial interface of the PC projector consists of a socket each for signal input (P-BUS IN) and signal output (P-BUS OUT), located at the back of the projector. This makes it possible to interconnect and control up to 16 projectors. An LED control light informs about an incoming P-COM signal. The familiar 14-pole DIN connector is also available for the conventional control of the LEICA PRADOVIT PC.
