The Paradoxical Situation in Carcinogenesis George D. K. Gogichadze, 2019-11-01 This volume is dedicated to the ethical problems related to carcinogenesis It discusses the karyogamic theory in a new light using new arguments and considers the prospects of cancer prevention and treatment The current stage of scientific development fails to answer such questions as What is a cancer cell What is its essence In the opinion of most cancer researchers the genetic apparatus of the target cell should be responsible for the conversion of a tumour cell into a normal one This book however highlights the often disregarded role of non DNA cellular elements in carcinogenesis It also investigates the loss of contact inhibition of cancer cells the cellular mechanism of malignization in the case of hemolytic anemia and the high oncogenic risk of low and medium doses of carcinogens as well as the common trigger mechanism of action of diametrically different carcinogens on target cells
