Objectification and (De)Humanization Sarah J. Gervais, 2013-05-24 People often see nonhuman agents as human like Through the processes of anthropomorphism and humanization people attribute human characteristics including personalities free will and agency to pets cars gods nature and the like Similarly there are some people who often see human agents as less than human or more object like In this manner objectification describes the treatment of a human being as a thing disregarding the person's personality and or sentience For example women medical patients racial minorities and people with disabilities are often seen as animal like or less than human through dehumanization and objectification These two opposing forces may be considered a continuum with anthropomorphism and humanization on one end and dehumanization and objectification on the other end Although researchers have identified some of the antecedents and consequences of these processes a systematic investigation of the motivations that underlie this continuum is lacking Considerations of this continuum may have considerable implications for such areas as everyday human functioning interactions with people animals and objects violence discrimination relationship development mental health or psychopathology The edited volume will integrate multiple theoretical and empirical approaches on this issue
