share with readers the intricacies as well as theoretician's conceptualizations of East Asian negotiation styles. The book is written from the sub discipline of cross cultural negotiating styles adopting some sociological anthropological perspectives anecdotes and concepts to discuss this subject matter. This volume hopes to fill in the gap between theoretical and applied knowledge through the use of theoretical concepts that readers from the West and other English language textbook readers are familiar with while supplementing the concepts with practitioner oriented case studies drawn from actual experiences. This prevents the publication from becoming a theory heavy text.
