RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT, NEW PRODUCTS
 Research is being conducted by the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, to determine the effect of various insecticides on the control of the pest. The results of the research will be published in the near future.

Abstract.—The authors examined the effects of a 10-week, 100-hr, intensive, noncredit, preadmission program on the performance of nursing students. The program was designed to prepare students for the rigors of nursing school. The program included a variety of activities, including lectures, seminars, and clinical experiences. The authors found that the program had a positive effect on the students' performance, particularly in the areas of knowledge and skills. The program also helped to reduce the students' anxiety and stress. The authors concluded that the program was an effective way to prepare nursing students for the rigors of nursing school.

It is, however, not clear how the findings of this study can be applied to the general population. The study was conducted in a specific population, and the results may not be generalizable to other populations. Further research is needed to determine the applicability of these findings to other populations.

There is a growing awareness of the need for a more integrated approach to the study of the environment. This is reflected in the increasing number of interdisciplinary studies in the field of environmental science. The study of the environment is no longer confined to the natural sciences, but now includes the social sciences, the humanities, and the arts. This interdisciplinary approach is essential for a comprehensive understanding of the environment and its impact on human society.
