Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in Ankara, Turkey. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. Physical fitness was measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period using a series of tests including a 1000m run, a 15m shuttle run, a 1min sit-up test, a 1min plank test, and a 1min heel sit test. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher scores than the control group in all five tests at the end of the 12-week period. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

<sup>12</sup> To address the issue, we estimated the model for each country separately. The results are available from the author upon request.

As noted earlier, the 1990s witnessed a dramatic rise in the number of people who were employed in the service sector. This was particularly true in the United States, where the service sector grew from 55% of the economy in 1970 to 75% in 1990. This growth was driven by a number of factors, including the increasing demand for services, the growth of the service sector, and the increasing demand for services.
