Topic: Tech & Engineering | Words: 1244 | Pages: 4

Most of these networks are genetic, worldwide web-based with a complex topology. A scale-free network is a connected network with the property that the number of links originating from a given node exhibits a powerful law of distribution. This network is constructed by adding nodes to the existing network progressively and also introducing new links to the already existing nodes with preferential attachment. This network expands continuously by the addition of new vertices (links) and these new links are attached to sites that are already well connected. Mathematically, the probability of linking the new node to the proportion to the existing links is what brought about the existence of the two networks. Examples of scale-free networks in science and engineering disciplines are the topology of web pages, where nodes are used on individual pages and links represent hyperlinks. Nodes and links function together simultaneously. Where the nodes are transformers, substations and generators, links are power transmitter lines. This description of scale-free networks indicates that the development of large networks is controlled by robust-self organizing phenomena that go beyond the already evaluated individual systems (Albert-Laszlo, 2003).

Random networks are models that assume the probabilities of two vertices connected are random and uniform which is not the case. Most real networks exhibit preferential connectivity. For example, the newly created webpage includes links to popular websites with already high connectivity. This example indicates there is a high probability that the
