King Of The Forest An Acre Of America Backyard Nature Series:

King of the Forest: an Acre of America Backyard Nature Series Sharon Delarose, 2013-05-27 Mother Nature bestowed a gift of survival on each of her beloved creatures whether it be the art of assassination built in booby traps body armor weaponry camouflage weather protection or even a form of Morse code to send messages to one's brethren Caterpillars that can shoot a stream of acid and hit a bull's eye insects that carry their own multi purpose hunting knife spiders that drift on the wind for miles dangling from silken parachutes and wasps that smuggle their babies into another wasp's nursery all possess tactics that help guarantee the survival of their species Humans aren't always on board with these wizards of survival and we've delved into the black art of population control using man made viruses and bacteria In the case of one invasive sea creature rather than attempting birth control the government launched a campaign urging us to eat as many of these creatures as possible to control their spread According to the government sales pitch We can't possibly eat too many of them While we're releasing biological agents to control the population of some species we're allowing others to go extinct and some of the animals facing the biggest risk of extinction would surprise you the big cats King of the Forest which is the third book in the Acre of America Backyard Nature Series highlights not only the wizards of survival that live on our one acre it takes you deep inside the world of the big cats some of which are already extinct as in gone forever Book one of the series includes Mother Nature's witches wizards dragons ghosts magic rings evil genies tree blobs pentagrams and Halloween Thus it titled The Wizard of Awe though I think of it as the Halloween book Book two takes you into the world of hummingbirds and the dangers they face from enemies such as praying mantises cannibalflies and spiders It also showcases the rainbow of colors from Mother Nature's palette and is thus titled Over the Hummingbird's Rainbow Sadly it demonstrates how devastating humans can be when we fall in love with a creature Humans were given the gift of intellect and the ability to build virtually anything our imaginations could conjure but in spite of these gifts humans are the worst enemy this planet faces despite thousands of years of collective knowledge wisdom and lessons we should have learned Yet hope exists as long as there are children who believe in the magic so be as a child again and experience Mother Nature's glory Pass the love down to your children and grandchildren so that they'll protect our Mother rather than destroy her Embrace the world in your own back yard There's no place like home
