Abstract: The authors examined the relationship between the use of a computerized decision support system (DSS) and the use of a decision tree (DT) in a complex decision-making task. The results showed that the use of a DSS significantly improved the performance of the decision maker in terms of the number of decisions made and the time taken to make a decision. The use of a DT significantly improved the performance of the decision maker in terms of the number of decisions made and the time taken to make a decision. The use of a DSS and a DT together significantly improved the performance of the decision maker in terms of the number of decisions made and the time taken to make a decision.
