Declaring Independence in Cyberspace Milton L. Mueller, 2025-05-13 How and why the US government gave up its control of ICANN the global coordinator of internet names numbers and protocols and what the geopolitical consequences were In 1997 the United States decided that the Internet should be governed not by governments but by something called the global Internet community In Declaring Independence in Cyberspace Milton Mueller tells the story of why it took 20 years of organizational and geopolitical struggle to make that happen ICANN Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers created in 1998 was the US government's answer to the question of who would control the Internet registries a key part of the Internet infrastructure supporting domain names network numbers IP addresses and other protocol parameters Originally ICANN was a bold institutional innovation based on a vision of Internet governance that was thoroughly globalized and independent of nation states Declaring Independence in Cyberspace explains where this vision came from the problems posed by its implementation and the organization's near self destruction in its first five years The US government refused to let go of ICANN for 15 years triggering geopolitical conflicts over sovereignty and US power Mueller details why what prompted its change of heart and how the problem of making ICANN accountable to its community in the absence of US government control sparked a political battle in Washington His account gets to the very heart of a pressing question with profound global implications Is state sovereignty the immutable foundation of global governance or do new technological capabilities change the model
