Caldwell, 2016-09-16 Excerpt from A Laboratory Manual for Work in General Science Laboratory work and the experiences of home and school furnish an important basis for the course in general science The following outlines for experiments and demonstrations have been developed so as to include the exercises which have proved most valuable for use in the first year of the high school The outlines are the result of the cooperative work of several high school teachers through a period of years and have been tried with more than a thousand pupils Experiments other than those here included have been tried but through constant trial

elimination and addition the work has assumed its present form It is the purpose of the outlines to direct the pupils into the habit of finding out about many kinds of common problems in science To do this in the best way common materials are used for experimentation since common and simple phenomena are likely to be more educative for young pupils than those which are uncommon and complex The materials needed are listed in connection with each exercise It is hoped that teachers will encourage pupils to use their own initiative in devising new ways to perform the experiments as well as in working out additional problems which are sure to be suggested in the discussion of the experiments here outlined At the close of the directions for work one or more additional problems are suggested and the use of these as topics for discussion will make the work more valuable The exercises have been planned so that each one requires a shorter period of continuous attention than is usually true in the more advanced laboratory work in high school science Experience has shown that first year pupils work more effectively when the units of work assigned are relatively short and definite This plan results in a larger number of exercises than would be used in a more advanced course in science In many cases however two or more exercises may be performed in a single laboratory period Supplementary or alternative experiments which sometimes require more complex apparatus are often given These supplementary experiments are indicated by the same arabic number as the preceding experiment but with a letter added Thus 22a is an experiment which may be used in addition to or instead of Exercise 22

A. Beran, Mark Lassiter, 2022-08-16

Laboratory Manual for Principles of General Chemistry 11th Edition covers two semesters of a general chemistry laboratory program The material focuses on the lab experiences that reinforce the concepts that not all experimental conclusions are the same and depend on identifying an appropriate experimental procedure selecting the proper apparatus employing the proper techniques systematically analyzing and interpreting the data and minimizing inherent variables As a result of good data a scientific and analytical conclusion is made which may or may not be right but is certainly consistent with the data Experiments write textbooks textbooks don't write experiments A student's scientific literacy grows when experiences and observations associated with the scientific method are encountered Further experimentation provides additional cause effect observations leading to an even better understanding of the experiment The 11th edition's experiments are informative and challenging while offering a solid foundation for technique safety and experimental procedure. The reporting and analysis of the data and the pre and post lab questions focus on the intuitiveness of the experiment. The experiments may accompany any general chemistry textbook and are compiled at the beginning of each curricular unit. An Additional Notes column is included in each experiment's Report Sheet to provide a space for recording observations and data during the experiment. Continued emphasis on handling data is supported by the Data Analysis section.
