Blaas, 2012-12-06 Several of the themes of this study have been treated in earlier publications some by means of a general analysis and some through a detailed handling of problems raised by a particular theme or historian Both the more general theoretical treatment of the theme and the concrete historiographical treatment are I think indispensable aids to the proper understanding of the development of historical scholarship in nineteenth and twentieth century England There are a number of problems in a concrete historiographical approach there is first the mass of historians to be faced and then the immense amount of historical themes dealt with in various periods As a guideline through the tangle of themes we chose the historiography on the development of the English parliament We can only hope that we have made a responsible choice of the historians concerned Unfortunately it was not always possible for us to give extensive biographies of some of the more recent historians as several papers are still firmly in the possession of families and a number of them must despite of years still be labelled confidential The Pollard Papers in the London Institute of Historical Research thus remained inaccessible Fortunately the lack was partly compensated by some important material being found apart from these Papers

Punishment Mark Tunick, 1915 What actions should be punished Should plea bargaining be allowed How should sentencing be determined In this original penetrating study Mark Tunick explores not only why society punishes wrongdoing but also how it implements punishment Contending that the theory and practice of punishment are inherently linked Tunick draws on a broad range of thinkers from the radical criticisms of Nietzsche Foucault and some Marxist theorists through the sociological theories of Durkheim and Girard to various philosophical traditions and the law and economics movement He defends punishment against its radical critics and offers a version of retribution distinct from revenge that holds that we punish not to deter or reform but to mete out just deserts vindicate right and express society's righteous anger Demonstrating first how this theory best accounts for how punishment is carried out he then provides immanent criticism of certain features of our practice that don't accord with the retributive principle Thought provoking and deftly argued Punishment will garner attention and spark debate among political theorists philosophers legal scholars sociologists and
