The illustration shows the right hand swing selected. The lower port has been pressurised by the spool. Oil flows from the parallel gallery, out past the ARV (Auxiliary Relief Valve) to both the head side of the left hand swing ram and the rod side of the right hand swing ram.

The boom therefore swings to the right hand side of the machine. Displaced oil from the rod side of the left hand swing ram and from the head side of the right hand swing ram flows back through the upper service port and back to tank.
