intoxicating and addictive had almost entirely colonized modern life. People were immersed in and ultimately defined by promotional culture. The things they consumed had overtaken class, religion, geography, or occupation as the primary form of self-identity and self-expression. For much of the twentieth century, all forms of brand communication, from political campaigning to product advertising, were based on the theory of rational appeals to rational consumers. There was only one problem with this theory: it was wrong. The Persuasion Industries: The Making of Modern Britain examines developments in marketing, advertising, public relations, and branding. It explores the role they played in the emergence of the consumer society. New ideas from fields of behavioural psychology and economics, together with internal developments such as planning, positioning, and corporate branding, allowed persuasion to become the driving force within many commercial enterprises. Together, these changes led to the emergence of an alternative, emotional model of brand communication. A simple idea that proved so compelling, it changed the world we live in. Resources in Education, 1989

The changing spaces of television acting Richard Hewett, 2017-08-17 This book provides a historical overview and then a then and now comparison of performing for British television drama. By examining changing acting styles from distinct eras of television production, studio realism, and location realism, it makes a unique contribution to both television and performance studies, unpacking the various determinants that have combined to influence how performers work in the medium. The book compares the original versions of The Quatermass Experiment (BBC 1953), Doctor Who (BBC 1963-89), and Survivors (BBC 1975-77) with their respective modern-day re-makes, unpacking the effects of the shift from multi-camera studio to single-camera location production. Textual analysis is combined with extensive archival research into production process and reception, alongside interviews with numerous actors and production personnel from more than sixty years of television production. FCC Record United States. Inequality in Contemporary Stand-Up Comedy in the UK Claire Sedgwick, 2024-04-25 This Pivot explores the cultural economy of comedy in the UK, looking specifically at the links between industry practices and structures and who produces comedy in the UK. The research is based on interviews with comedians in the East Midlands; significantly, this demographic has been historically under-researched in studies of precarity, where the East Midlands is typically overlooked in discussions of arts funding and access in favour of a more simplistic north-south divide narrative. Similarly, whilst there has been increased discussion of the precarity of the creative and cultural industries, as well as media articles on the difficulty of breaking into comedy as a member of a marginalised group, there has been relatively little academic research to support this. While Friedman's work, in particular, has been helpful for understanding the link between comedy producers, class, and taste-making, there has been less attention paid to the sociologies of work within comedy. This book fills these gaps in research by exploring the experiences of comedians in the East Midlands, contributing to the rich body of scholarship on inequality in the cultural industries and promoting a better understanding of the impact of structural inequalities and precarity on access to the cultural industries. Focus On: 100 Most Popular Television Series by
