These conversations take place online when 8th graders write to their teacher about the books they're interested in reading and choosing to read independently. Students write about what happens when they read or don't read, how they feel about reading, how they're connecting with characters and ideas, why they don't have enough time to read, and what their reading goals are. And their teacher writes back to them. Every week. After each conversation, you will read some meta-talk that shines a light on what the conversation has taught us about this language learner and how this data is informing our beliefs and practices. Embedded within the chapters are suggested resources, articles, book recommendations, links, websites, blogs, etc. you can follow should you want to read more in that chapter. What these students reveal about their own literacy development, their successes, their challenges, their lives, and how their teacher nudges them along socially, emotionally, and academically, teach us the value and power of one practical, authentic literacy tool: the Reading Conversation Journal.

As she comes into adulthood, Grace confronts the mystery of her own identity and the story of her birth mother in this sprawling, large-hearted novel. Growing up on the Caribbean island of St. Christopher, Grace Carpenter never feels like she really belongs. Although her large extended family is black, she is a redibo. Her skin is copper-colored, her hair is red, and her eyes are grey. A neighbour taunts her, calling her a little red jacket, but the reason for the insult is never explained. Only much later does Grace learn the story of her birth mother and decipher the mystery surrounding her true identity. A compelling tale of faith and family, ranging from the dusty landscapes of West Africa to the rich flavours of the Caribbean.

Literature Study Circles in a Multicultural Classroom Katharine Davies Samway, Gail Whang, 1996. Because all they've got is a skeleton. They don't have a heart and a brain or anything. Sean, a student in Gail Whang's classroom, is talking about reading textbooks. Like too many students, his experiences of school reading have been confined to the excerpted and abridged stories that often appear in reading texts. Even in an era when literature-based reading instruction is becoming more popular, turning children on to books does not appear to be happening. Katharine and Gail show how they changed this trend in Gail's fifth-sixth grade classroom. Gail's students are considered at risk because they are nonnative English speakers and/or come from low-income homes. And like many inner-city teachers in similar situations, Gail realized her language arts program was not working. As bored and discouraged as her students, she explored alternatives to traditional methods and began to use literature study circles (LSCs) to engage students and help them develop their abilities to think and talk about issues in their lives. A thoroughly practical book, Literature Study Circles helps teachers move from curriculum-centered to learner-centered teaching. Provides sample documents used in LSCs and examples of students' written responses to books. Includes bibliographies of popular fifth-sixth grade literature lists of African American, Asian American, Native American, and Latino authors and professional readings on LSCs.
