 Writers & Classical Tradition William W. Cook,James Tatum,2024-05-31 Constraints on freedom education and individual dignity have always been fundamental in determining who is able to write when and where. Considering the singular experience of the African American writer William W. Cook and James Tatum, here we argue that African American literature did not develop apart from canonical Western literary traditions but instead grew out of those literatures even as it adapted and transformed the cultural traditions and religions of Africa and the African diaspora along the way. Tracing the interaction between African American writers and the literatures of ancient Greece and Rome from the time of slavery and its aftermath to the civil rights era and on into the present, the authors offer a sustained and lively discussion of the life and work of Phillis Wheatley, Frederick Douglass, Ralph Ellison, and Rita Dove among other highly acclaimed poets, novelists, and scholars. Assembling this brilliant and diverse group of African American writers at a moment when our understanding of classical literature is ripe for change, the authors paint an unforgettable portrait of our own reception of classic writing, especially as it was inflected by American racial politics.

Each piece is steeped in a deep understanding of the American spirit and the cultural contexts of their times, making this collection a quintessential resource for both casual readers and scholars alike. Zane Grey (1872-1939) was not only a prolific writer but also a passionate outdoorsman whose adventures in American wilderness informed much of his fiction. His experiences as a dentist combined with his fascination for the rugged life of cowboys and the allure of historical narratives deeply shaped his narrative voice.
