All software-related products, either generated by a small group or a huge organization, require some level of documentation. Various sorts of documents are developed during the entire software development lifecycle (SDLC). Documentation exists to clarify product functionality, consolidate project-related information, and enable stakeholders and developers to discuss any important questions that may arise.

Software documentation is designed for two types of audiences: software engineers and end users. Documentation in the field of software engineering encompasses knowledge and publications that help experts understand the planning, development, and implementation of products. This documentation helps engineers understand, update, and modify software from the bottom up.

Software documentation outlines what software developers did when creating the product and what IT professionals and customers must do to install and use it. Manuals are typically incorporated into the software's user interface and are also
