

Genre Study

Grease is a film in the genre of a musical. According to Wikipedia,

The musical film is a film genre in which songs sung by the characters are interwoven into the narrative, sometimes accompanied by dancing. The songs usually advance the plot or develop the film's characters, though in some cases they serve merely as breaks in the storyline, often as elaborate "production numbers." The musical film was a natural development of the stage musical about the convergence of sound film technology. Typically, the biggest difference between film and stage musicals is the use of lavishly backgrounded scenery and locations that would be impractical in a theater. Musical films characteristically contain elements reminiscent of theater: performers often treat their song and dance numbers as if there is a live audience watching. In a sense, the viewer becomes the invisible audience, as the performer looks directly into the camera and performs to it.

In the 1970s, film culture and the changing demographics of filmgoers placed greater emphasis on gritty realism, while the pure entertainment and theatricality of classical-era Hollywood musicals was seen as old-fashioned. Changing cultural mores and the abandonment of the Hays Code in 1968 also contributed to changing tastes in film audiences. By the mid-1970s, filmmakers avoided the genre in favor of using music by popular rock or pop bands as background music, partly in hope of selling a soundtrack album to fans. Grease was a much hit; its songs were original compositions done in a 1950s pop style.
