Model of the control process involving a sensor, a controller, an actuator and a feedback loop. The model is used to design a control system for a process.

Model of a Negative Feedback Loop

Homeostatic control systems are designed to maintain a setpoint. A negative feedback loop is a control system that uses a negative feedback loop to maintain the setpoint. The system is designed to maintain the setpoint by comparing the setpoint to the current value of the process variable. If the current value is higher than the setpoint, the system will decrease the process variable. If the current value is lower than the setpoint, the system will increase the process variable.
