Phosphorus transfer to water from the sediments of the Tiber River, Italy, was studied using ^{32}P and ^{33}P isotopes. The results show that the transfer of phosphorus from the sediments to the water column is controlled by the rate of sedimentation and the rate of phosphorus release from the sediments. The rate of sedimentation is controlled by the rate of erosion and the rate of deposition. The rate of phosphorus release from the sediments is controlled by the rate of phosphorus sorption and the rate of phosphorus desorption. The results show that the transfer of phosphorus from the sediments to the water column is a complex process that involves many factors.
