¹² To address the issue, we estimated the model for each country separately. The results are available from the author upon request.

As noted earlier, the 1990s witnessed a dramatic rise in the number of U.S. firms operating in foreign markets. This rise was driven by a number of factors, including the globalization of markets, the increasing importance of international trade, and the growing competition from foreign firms. The rise in international trade was particularly significant, as it provided U.S. firms with new opportunities to expand their sales and production. The growing competition from foreign firms was also a major factor, as it forced U.S. firms to seek out new markets and ways to improve their competitive advantage.
