- The graph shows that except for the Western Cape where the predicted number of seats and the actual number of seats is the same, in all the other provinces the predicted result is more than the actual number of seats. In three of the provinces namely KwaZulu-Natal, Limpopo and Mpumalanga the predicted result was significantly more than the actual number of seats. ✓ ✓ ✓ 4
- 1.4 The predicted results anticipated that COPE would do much better than it did. They predicted that this would result in the ANC getting fewer votes than it actually did get. In the Western Cape they predicted that the ID would do much better than it did which meant that the ANC and the DA did better than was predicted. The result was that the DA did get above 50% of the votes in the Western Cape. This survey gave the impression that the rise of COPE would make a big difference to the number of votes that the ANC would get. The sample that they used to obtain their data was only 0,03% of the voting population, which is a very small sample and hence could have given a skewed opinion. Mathematical Literacy Paper 2 Exemplar 2014:

The Intersection of International Achievement Testing and Educational Policy Louis Volante, 2016-06-10

Educational systems around the world look to student assessment programs as they initiate reforms and revise educational policies to increase student achievement. This edited volume examines the intersection of international achievement testing and education policy development in key countries around the world, exploring how assessments can inform curriculum, pedagogy, strategic planning, and ultimately determine large scale education policy and governance. Noted chapter contributors explore how educational leadership and governance issues have been influenced by assessment programs across a range of political, economic, cultural, and educational contexts. The Intersection of International Achievement Testing and Education Policy provides educators, academics, and policymakers with cultural insights, historical contexts, and a framework for negotiating and understanding the consequences of educational policy decisions in schools.

Development of executive function during childhood Yusuke Moriguchi, Philip D Zelazo, Nicolas Chevalier, 2016-04-01

Executive function refers to the goal-oriented regulation of one's own thoughts, actions, and emotions. Its importance is attested by its contribution to the development of other cognitive skills, e.g., theory of mind, social abilities, e.g., peer interactions, and academic achievement, e.g., mathematics, and by the consequences of deficits in executive function which are observed in a wide range of developmental disorders such as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and autism. Over the last decade, there have been growing interests in the development of executive function, and an expanding body of research has shown that executive function develops rapidly during the preschool years, with adult level performance being achieved during adolescence or later. This recent work, together with experimental research showing the effects of interventions targeting executive function, has yielded important insights into the neurocognitive processes underlying executive function. Given the complexity of the construct of executive function, however, and the multiplicity of underlying processes, there are often inconsistencies in the way that executive function is defined and studied. This inconsistency has hampered communication among researchers from various fields. This Research Topic is intended to bridge this gap and provide an opportunity for researchers from different perspectives to discuss recent advances in understanding childhood executive function. Researchers using various methods, including behavioral experiments, neuroimaging, eye tracking, computer simulation, observational methods, and questionnaires, are encouraged to contribute original empirical research. In addition to original empirical articles, theoretical reviews and opinion perspective articles on promising future directions are welcome. We hope that researchers from different areas such as developmental psychology, educational psychology, experimental psychology, neuropsychology, neuroscience, psychiatry, computational science, etc., will be represented in the Research Topic.
