education that comes from experiencing real work in real situations has always been a prerequisite to qualification in professions such as medicine However there is growing interest in how practice based models of learning can assist the initial preparation for and further development of skills for a wider range of occupations Rather than being seen as a tool of first time training it is now viewed as a potentially important facet of professional development and life long learning This book provides perspectives on practice based learning from a range of disciplines and fields of work The collection here draws on a wide spectrum of perspectives to illustrate as well as to critically appraise approaches to practice based learning The book s two sections first explore the conceptual foundations of learning through practice and then provide detailed examples of its implementation Long standing practice based approaches to learning have been used in many professions and trades Indeed admission to the trades and major professions e g medicine law accountancy can only be realised after completing extended periods of practice in authentic practice settings However the growing contemporary interest in using practice based learning in more extensive contexts has arisen from concerns about the direct employability of graduates and the increasing focus on occupation specific courses in both vocations and higher education It is an especially urgent issue in an era of critical skill shortages rapidly transforming work requirements and an aging workforce combined with a looming shortage of new workforce entrants We must better understand how existing models of practice based learning are enacted in order to identify how they can be applied to different kinds of employment and workplaces The contributions to this volume explore ways in which learning through practice can be conceptualised enacted and appraised through an analysis of the traditions purposes and processes that support this learning including curriculum models and pedagogic practices

Attitude Measurements in Science Education Dr. Myint Swe Khine, 2015-04-01

The research into how students attitudes affect learning of science related subjects have been one of the core areas of interest by science educators The development in science education records various attempts in measuring attitudes and determining the correlations between behaviour achievements career aspirations gender identity and cultural inclination Some researchers noted that attitudes can be learned and teachers can encourage students to like science subjects through persuasion But some view that attitude is situated in context and it is much to do with upbringing and environment The critical role of attitude is well recognized in advancing science education in particular designing curriculum and choosing powerful pedagogies and nurturing students Since Noll 1935 seminal work on measuring the scientific attitudes a steady stream of research papers that describe development and validation of scales appear in scholarly publications Despite these efforts the progress in this area has been stagnated by limited understanding of the conception about attitude dimensionality and inability to determine the multitude of variables that made up such concept This book makes an attempt to take stock and critically examine the classical views on science attitudes and explore the contemporary attempts in measuring science related attitudes The chapters in this book are reflection of researchers who work tirelessly in promoting science education and will illuminate the current trends and future scenarios in attitude measurement
