

11. Chapter 11: Functions & Graphical Modeling - A Constructivist Mathematical Perspective

11.1 The Constructivist Mathematical Perspective

- 11.1.1 Constructivism as a Philosophy of Mathematics
 - 11.1.1.1 Constructivism is a philosophical position that mathematics is not discovered but constructed by humans. It emphasizes the role of human activity in the development of mathematical knowledge.
 - 11.1.1.2 Constructivists believe that mathematical objects and concepts are created through human interaction with the world. They argue that mathematics is a human-made system of symbols and rules, rather than a pre-existing reality.
 - 11.1.1.3 Constructivists emphasize the importance of understanding the process of mathematical discovery and the role of the learner in constructing their own knowledge. They believe that learning should be an active process where students explore and discover mathematical concepts for themselves.

11.2 The Role of the Teacher

- 11.2.1 The Teacher as a Facilitator
 - 11.2.1.1 In a constructivist classroom, the teacher's role is to facilitate the learning process rather than to deliver knowledge. They create a supportive environment where students can explore and discover mathematical concepts on their own.
 - 11.2.1.2 Teachers act as guides, providing resources and asking questions that help students think critically and solve problems. They encourage students to share their ideas and learn from each other.
- 11.2.2 The Teacher as a Co-Constructor
 - 11.2.2.1 Teachers also participate in the learning process alongside their students. They engage in mathematical activities with the students, modeling problem-solving strategies and sharing their own mathematical thinking.
 - 11.2.2.2 This collaborative approach helps students see mathematics as a shared activity rather than a one-way transmission of knowledge. It also allows teachers to learn from their students' insights and misconceptions.

11.3 The Importance of Context

- 11.3.1 Mathematics in Real-World Contexts
 - 11.3.1.1 Constructivists argue that mathematics should be taught in the context of real-world problems. This helps students understand the relevance of mathematical concepts and see how they are used in everyday life.
 - 11.3.1.2 By connecting math to real-world situations, teachers can make learning more engaging and meaningful for students. It also helps them develop problem-solving skills that are applicable in various contexts.

11.4 The Role of Assessment

- 11.4.1 Formative Assessment
 - 11.4.1.1 Constructivists favor formative assessment over summative assessment. Formative assessment is ongoing and provides feedback to both teachers and students during the learning process.
 - 11.4.1.2 This type of assessment helps teachers understand where students are in their learning and adjust their instruction accordingly. It also encourages students to reflect on their own learning and take ownership of their progress.
