These measurements are thus mutually consistent (Fig. 2B,C), indicating a sharp drop in the T<sub>1</sub>ρ values of these compounds (and an added perspective for water) that correlates to a decrease in the correlation time (τ<sub>c</sub>) of the protons. This change in the correlation time suggests that the addition of these alcohols leads to a decrease in the correlation time of the protons, which is consistent with the decrease in the correlation time of the protons of the water molecules. This is consistent with the decrease in the correlation time of the protons of the water molecules, which is consistent with the decrease in the correlation time of the protons of the water molecules.
