Crisis Transmission in the Global Banking Network Galina Hale, Mr. Tümer Kapan, Ms. Camelia Minoiu, 2016-04-12
We study the transmission of financial sector shocks across borders through international bank connections For this purpose we use data on long term interbank loans among more than 6 000 banks during 1997 2012 to construct a yearly global network of interbank exposures We estimate the effect of direct first degree and indirect second degree exposures to countries experiencing systemic banking crises on bank profitability and loan supply We find that direct exposures to crisis countries squeeze banks profit margins thereby reducing their returns Indirect exposures to crisis countries enhance this effect while indirect exposures to non crisis countries mitigate it Furthermore crisis exposures have real effects in that they reduce banks supply of domestic and cross border loans Our results based on a large global sample support the notion that interconnected financial systems facilitate shock transmission monetary and fiscal policy Volume I examines economic behavior on the assumption that economic agents correctly interpret the data before them It thus takes a micro foundations approach under which aggregate supply equals aggregate demand Volume II allows for the possibility of myopia on the part of economic agents and for the resulting economic malperformance that can result from this myopia It examines the short run disparities between aggregate supply and aggregate demand that can result from ill informed choices of individual economic agents or from a misdiagnosis of economic data by policy makers It concludes with a review of recent U S economic policy The book aims to correct a good number of misconceptions that bedevil economic policymaking among them the idea that protracted economic contractions necessarily call for increased government spending and lower taxes It challenges the common understanding that government deficits raise interest rates and crowd out private investment
