The New Frontier and the Great Society, 1960-1968

Chapter 1: The New Frontier

Section 1: The New Frontier

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

1. The Election of 1960

1. The election of 1960 was the first time that both parties used television to reach voters. The election was very close, with Kennedy winning by a narrow margin. Kennedy's victory was a result of his campaign strategy, which focused on television appearances and a strong record in the military.

2. Kennedy's Policies

1. Kennedy's policies were aimed at reducing the role of the federal government in the economy. He believed that the government should not interfere with the free market, and that the private sector should be responsible for creating jobs and economic growth.
2. Kennedy's policies were also aimed at reducing the role of the federal government in social welfare. He believed that the government should not be responsible for providing social services, and that these services should be provided by the private sector.
3. Kennedy's policies were also aimed at reducing the role of the federal government in foreign affairs. He believed that the government should not be responsible for maintaining peace and stability in the world, and that this responsibility should be left to the United Nations.

3. The Great Society

1. The Great Society was a series of programs and policies that were designed to eliminate poverty and improve the lives of the poor. It was a major part of Kennedy's New Frontier program, and it was continued by his successor, Lyndon B. Johnson.
2. The Great Society programs included the creation of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the creation of the Department of Social Services, and the creation of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.
3. The Great Society programs also included the creation of the Office of Economic Opportunity, the creation of the Office of Manpower Administration, and the creation of the Office of Community Development.
