

pump camshaft (C). When demands for pressurized fluid are met, the distributing valve closes inlet valves off from charging pressure and pump pistons fail to follow cam. Pumping action thus stops until a drop in standby pressure signals a demand for additional fluid. The metering action of the distributing valve determines volume delivered, up to the maximum capacity of the system.

Pressurized fluid enters the pump cover at a charging pressure of up to 100 psi. The distributing valve piston is spring-loaded in the open position. Orifices lead from the charging pressure passages into bearing and camshaft area of pump to provide lubrication. Fluid from the main pump high pressure gallery passes through a metering valve to the area behind the distributing valve piston, then through fixed orifices to the charging passage, to balance the high pressure system requirements.

The control cover also contains a "Quick Recovery" valve which is spring loaded to the open position and closed by hydraulic pressure. The quick recovery valve connects the intermediate (control) pressure passage to charging passage. A sudden drop in standby pressure causes the quick recovery valve to open, dumping pressure from the control passage and allowing the distributing valve to completely open. A full supply of high pressure fluid is thus provided to meet system demands.

226. REMOVE AND REINSTALL. To remove the main hydraulic pump, first drain radiator and remove lower radiator hose. Suitably support tractor under front of oil pan. Either remove axle assembly or move axle forward. To move axle forward, detach tie rod from right spindle, remove the rear support bracket (2—Fig. 2 or Fig. 3), loosen the right rear cap screw attaching front support bracket (9) and remove the other three attaching capscrews. The front axle can be rotated forward as shown in Fig. 351.

Remove protector plate from below pump. Loosen all four bolts securing pump drive shaft to crankshaft pulley. Move drive shaft into pump and align cap screws with holes in pump casting, then complete removal of the four cap screws. Disconnect all tubes from pump and cap all openings in tubes and in pump.

NOTE: The main hydraulic pump weighs more than 100 lbs. and means must be provided for lifting the pump down out of front support. The manufacturer provides a tool for pump removal as shown in Figs. 353 and 354.

Attach the tool or other suitable means to pump body and remove the mounting bolts, then swing pump away from tractor frame.

Install the pump by reversing removal procedure, making sure that drive coupler properly aligns with crankshaft pulley. Tighten all bolts securely.

227. OVERHAUL. With pump removed as outlined in paragraph 226, refer to Fig. 355 and proceed as follows:

Carefully withdraw pump coupling (1). Remove two of the 5/8-11 cap screws securing valve body (24) to piston housing (9) and install five-inch aligning studs. Loosen and remove the other two cap screws evenly, then carefully remove valve body and distributing valve springs (12 & 13).

228. VALVE BODY. Distributing valve piston (14—Fig. 355) must slide smoothly in the sleeve in valve body and seating piston (25) must move smoothly in guide (15). Refer to Fig. 356 for cross sectional view.

Remove the snap ring from secondary relief valve (16—Fig. 355) and fish out the valve if necessary, using a small wire. Unscrew plug and remove main relief valve (19). Remove quick recovery valve (20) and metering valve (21), working from both ends of bore.

Remove the eight inlet valves (17), being careful the valve discs do not fall into inlet manifold and become lodged. Check the valve seats in body for damage.

The two orifice plugs (18 and 23) will not need to be removed unless their condition is questionable. Actuating piston guide (15) is installed with "Loctite" and will not need to be removed unless "O" ring or guide are to be renewed or trouble is suspected. Clean and inspect all parts and remove any which are damaged or questionable.

When assembling the metering valve, refer to Fig. 357 and proceed as follows: Working from bottom side of

Fig. 352—View of pump and drive coupling (2). Pump inlet fitting is shown at (1) and pump drive flange at (2).

Fig. 353—Using the special tool (MFN-762) to remove the main hydraulic pump. Refer also to Fig. 354.

1. Adjusting screw
2. Lockbar
3. Drive bar
4. Pump cradle

Fig. 351—To remove the main hydraulic pump, disconnect one tie rod and pivot axle support out of way as shown.

Fig. 354—The special tool is designed to lift pump from tractor and to lift it into position when installing. Refer also to Fig. 353.
