

State public health systems and their vital and health statistics reporting systems provide much of the data on health care disparities. States have the primary responsibility for the protection of public health. As part of that responsibility, states have developed a coordinated system of data collection and reporting. They have also developed programmatic interventions that vary. State governments vary in the degree of support for public health and health care delivery, and there are differences in the structures of their health care delivery systems that are due to their respective populations, cultures, and histories. The states vary as markedly in investment in health as they do in health outcomes. Figure 5-1 describes a potentially close relationship between per capita health spending and years of potential life lost (YPLL).

Key to the identification of a substantial difference in health status or access between geographically defined populations or population segments is the degree to which the boundaries separate or include the population that is negatively affected or the degree to which the nature of the area itself affects health and health care. Maps of the United States at the state level show strong and important
