George Alfred Henty,2020-04-30 The first day of term cannot be considered a cheerful occasion As the boys arrive on the previous evening they have so much to tell each other are so full of what they have been doing that the chatter and laughter are as great as upon the night preceding the breaking up In the morning however all this is changed As they take their places at their desks and open their books a dull heavy feeling takes possession of the boys and the full consciousness that they are at the beginning of another half year s work weighs heavily on their minds It is true enough that the half year will have its play too its matches with their rivalry and excitement But at present it is the long routine of lessons which is most prominent in the minds of the lads who are sitting on the long benches of the King's School Canterbury As a whole however these have not great reason for sadness Not more than a third of them are boarders and the rest who have in truth for the last week begun to be tired of their holidays will when they once get out of school and begin to choose sides for football be really glad that the term has again commenced So your brother is not coming back again Archer one of the boys said to a lad of some fifteen years old a merry curly haired fellow somewhat short for his age but square shouldered and sturdy No He is expecting in another six months to get his commission and is going up to town to study with a coach My father has lodged the money for him and hopes to get him gazetted to his old regiment the 33d What is he going to a coach for There is no examination is there And if there was I should think he could pass it He has been in the sixth for the last year Oh he is all right enough Archer said But my father is sending him to an army man to get up military drawing and fortification Dad says it is of no use his going on grinding here at Greek and Latin and that he had much better spend the time till he gets his commission in learning something that may be of use to him I wish I had done with Latin and Greek too I'm sure they'll never be of any use to me and I hate them
