Tools of the Trade Stephanie L. Brooke,2004 This new edition with its revised title provides critical reviews of art therapy tests along with some new reviews of assessments and updated research in the field It is comprehensive in its approach to considering reliability and validity evidence provided by test authors. Additionally, it reviews research on art therapy assessments with a variety of patient populations. The book contains helpful suggestions regarding the application of art therapy assessments. Specific areas covered include individual, group, family, and multicultural assessment techniques. The desirable and undesirable features of a variety of art therapy assessments are deliberated. The book critiques a series of art therapy assessments from traditional art therapy approaches to current releases. The goal of this work is to assist mental health professionals in selecting assessments that yield reliable and valid clinical information regarding their clients. Of special interest is the author's approach to writing the results of a series of art therapy assessments in an effort to provide a more complete indication of client dynamics and issues. It will be a valuable resource for practitioners who use art therapy as an adjunct or primary therapy and it will serve to enhance clinical skills, making therapy more effective for each patient who participates in the assessment process.

PERSONALITY, BEHAVIOR, AND CONTEXT reviews the use of projective methods, interviewing, and observation; and objective methods of assessing personality and behavior; discusses the assessment of specific syndromes and symptoms and presents tools for assessing adaptive skills and the family context.

Understanding Psychological Testing in Children Stewart Gabel, G.D. Oster, S.M. Butnik, 1986-08-31 There is a considerable amount of interest within pediatrics and primary health care that is currently being directed toward the behavioral and emotional problems of childhood. Traditionally, these areas have been emphasized by child psychiatrists, child psychologists, and psychiatric social workers. Now, however, the detection and, in some cases, the assessment and treatment of children with these types of disturbances fall within the province of primary child health care professionals. Even when the child psychiatrist or child psychologist provides the primary mental health treatment for the child, specialists such as pediatricians, family physicians, pediatric nurses, pediatric nurse practitioners, and speech therapists remain instrumental in support of the ongoing psychotherapeutic process as providers of some other aspect of total health care to the child and family. For these pediatricians, family physicians, and other nonpsychologists, primary health care providers it is essential to acquire an understanding and effective working knowledge of important psychological information and concepts to utilize within their own framework and professional responsibilities In order that this may be accomplished these professionals with limited backgrounds in psychology must better understand how psychologists themselves assess children and how they derive the conclusions reflected in the statements and reports that are shared with members of their own and other disciplines In short nonpsychologists must become substantially more familiar with psychological assessment particularly with psychological testing and the subsequent reporting of results

Psychonephrology 1 Norman B. Levy, 2013-06-29 Major nephrological and psychological organizations have at best set aside only small portions of their programs for papers or panels devoted to the psychological aspect of patients with end stage renal disease Thus the increased need for information concerning the psychological aspects of end stage renal disease has been met by occasional journal articles professional peer discussions small portions of national conferences and informal conversations and consultations with people with clinical and research experience in these areas The First International Conference on Psychological Factors in Hemodialysis and Transplantation arose out of a need to have a forum in which the major people involved in treatment and research in this area could share their latest work among themselves and with the registrants The initial encouragement for organizing such a conference came from the rank and file of nephrology social workers nephrology nurses and liaison psychiatrists and psychologists In early 1977 I had decided that I would make an effort to organize such a meeting and asked the two other individuals most closely identified with major research in this area Atara Kaplan De Nour and Harry S Abram to join me in planning this conference With their support and suggestions concerning the program I embarked upon an attempt to raise financial backing for it I was somewhat surprised to find that the many equipment and drug companies supporting nephrological conferences were not greatly interested in this one

Assessment in the Creative Arts Therapies Stephen Snow, 2009 The Silver Drawing Test and Draw a Story Rawley Silver, 2010-06-21 Art can be an invaluable means of communication It can bypass language and impairment and allow for the expression of thoughts or feelings too difficult to communicate with words In The Silver Drawing Test and Draw a Story Rawley Silver draws on her years of experience using therapeutic art with hearing impaired children stroke patients and others with learning disabilities or emotional disturbances The book's original art assessments use stimulus drawings to elicit responses that provide access to a patient's emotions and attitudes toward themselves and others while also testing for the ability to solve problems and convey ideas Offering tools to assess cognitive skills that often escape detection on verbal tests of intelligence or achievement the book helps in identifying those at risk for violent behavior or masked depression Thoroughly updated from Silver's earlier works this new book includes techniques to assess aggression and depression that may lead to violence in schools and suicide among children and adolescents It also addresses important gender and age differences incorporating new information and updated studies and it offers an in depth look at the developmental procedures involved in these art assessments As education for mental health professionals now includes art therapy more regularly Silver has provided an invaluable resource for assessing emotional and cognitive content
