Hounds Whippoorwills Rg Heinsohn Jr:

Hounds and Whippoorwills R. G. Heinsohn, Jr., 2015-11-08 I have been blessed with an eventful life most of it spent in the Smoky Mountains area of East Tennessee I have traveled to every state in the United States I have hunted and fished from the Caribbean Islands to the Tundra line in North Canada and the lands between the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans I have enjoyed participating in business relationships with people of all ages and walks of life from the deep hollers in the mountains from the ghettos in the cities to the government of China Never in my life have I seen a more diverse set of personalities than in Townsend Tennessee This may be due to people from all over the country mainly Baby Boomers retiring to this area Some of the local diversity is driven by economic status or lack thereof Some is driven by education or lack thereof and some is driven by tremendous intelligence or lack thereof When the Federal government displaced the people living in the mountains to create the Smoky Mountains National Park the social fabric of communities from Native Indians to pioneer villages was often compromised My writing instructor Tom Bird owner of Sojourn Publishing LLC once made the following remark All books are to some degree autobiographies of the author This is true I have been keeping notes and writing stories over my events or stories told to me by others for decades Most of the stories in this book are fact Some are speculation Some parts may be completely false But the stories were told and the dreams were experienced My first attempt to organize these stories ended in a book of over 900 pages with over 60 characters Under Tom Bird's guidance I have broken this effort into more than one book Hounds and Whippoorwills is the first one Tuckaleechee Tears now almost complete will follow The one thing you will sure think about after completing this book is who are the people living in your community and how well do you really know them
