Handbook Environmental Management Franz Bernd Frechen:

Odours and VOCs: Measurement, Regulation and Control Techniques Franz-Bernd Frechen, 2009 Routledge
Handbook of Urban Water Governance Thomas Bolognesi, Francisco Silva Pinto, Megan Farrelly, 2022-09-01 This handbook provides a comprehensive state of the art overview of urban water governance Of the many growing challenges presented by rapid urbanization water governance is a critical one and while urban water governance is now regarded as a critical field of research the literature is fragmented For the first time this handbook brings together urban water governance research containing interdisciplinary contributions from established and emerging scholars practitioners and policymakers It addresses the key questions of how urban water governance works how is it shaped and what the impacts are The handbook s structure offers a progressive entry into the complexity of urban water governance Starting with technical dimensions the handbook addresses supply and demand wastewater and sanitation It then considers regulation and economic factors examining water utilities and services Political processes and the actors involved are addressed and the handbook finishes with a part focusing on governance and sustainability where chapters address critically important topics such as access to water water safety and water security This handbook is essential reading for students scholars and professionals interested in urban water governance urban studies and water resource management and sustainability more broadly

Odours in Wastewater Treatment Richard M. Stuetz, Franz-Bernd Frechen, 2001-03-01 Wastewater treatment works have the potential to generate unpleasant odours which can results in annoyance and consequently have a detrimental effect on a local population As a result odour control and prevention has become an important consideration both in the management of existing facilities and in the design and gaining of planning consent for new works Odours in Wastewater Treatment provides readers with a detailed discussion on the basic principles involved in the formation of volatile compounds in wastewater treatment Accounts are given of recent developments in the sampling and measurement of odours practical examples in the prediction and dispersion of odorous emissions are offered and an overview of the technologies currently used to contain and treat odorous compounds presented Contents Introduction Odours associated with wastewater treatment Odour sampling and measurement Assessment and prediction of nuisance odours Odour control and treatment Handbook of Environmental Odour Management Franz-Bernd Frechen, Jean-Michel Guillot, Richard M. Stuetz, Anton P. van Harreveld, 2013 Complaints due to odour annoyance have become a major issue for wastewater treatment plant waste management landfill intensive livestock and other industrial operators as the repeated release of unpleasant odorous emissions can constitute a nuisance to a local population Traditionally odour management has been maintained by the use of buffer distances between industry and receptors or by the installation of odour abatement systems that both collect and disperse the emission or treat the emission to acceptable level to limit receptor impact With the expansion of suburbia and the associated encroachment residents and industry are coming into closer proximity than in the past This interaction is unpredictable complex and difficult to address Integrated odour impact management approaches involving improved measurement and understanding of odorous emissions their impact on local receptors treatment performance and integration in local community relations programs are needed to meet the potential impact due to population growth and increasing global urbanisation EDITORS Franz Bernd Frechen Professor at the University of Kassel Germany Jean Michel Guillot Professor at the cole de Mines d Al s France Richard Stuetz Professor at the University of New South Wales Australia Anton P Van Harreveld CEO at Odournet

Odour and Volatile Organic Compounds John Kaiyun Jiang, 2001-11 Recently the development of odour measurement regulation and control techniques has made great progress with new and updated standards and regulations for odour control and measurement in Europe and Australasia in the United States odour was listed as one of the key areas for action by the Agricultural Air Quality Task Force In these circumstances it is clear that a uniform systematic approach to quantifying and solving odour problems worldwide is highly desirable This motivated the 1st IWA International Conference on Odours and VOCs with its focus on measurement regulation and control techniques The conference emphasised the need to standardise the approaches to odour measurement to quantify odour impact from various emission sources for regulatory purposes and to devise ways of alleviating odour impact on local communities These subjects are of concern nationally and internationally because of the decreasing tolerance to such impacts by local communities and the current lack of effective solutions From the papers presented 42 have been selected for these proceedings dealing with olfactometry field observation and sampling odour regulations physical treatment odour dispersion modelling volatilisation models animal farming odours manure treatment biofilters odour control for anaerobic ponds and H₂S removal They represent the latest work of leading experts from European Asian North American Australian and New Zealand universities agencies and organisations and will prove a major resource for all interested in the research and practice of odour measurement and control Verzeichnis lieferbarer Bücher, 2002
