Language Processing in Chinese Hsuan Chih Chen, Ovid J.L. Tzeng, 1992-05-25 The aim of this book is to integrate the most recent research in the cognitive aspects of the Chinese language into a single academic reference for those interested in language processing and related fields Chinese is perhaps the most widely used language in the world In addition to its popularity many specific features make it unique in relation to many Indo European languages Chinese words generally do not have inflections indicating grammatical attributes such as number gender and case for nouns or tense and aspect for verbs Chinese words have no inherently marked lexical categories Unlike the alphabetic symbols common to Indo European languages the Chinese writing system is logographic in nature Chinese script speech relationship is highly opaque with the Chinese characters representing lexical morphemes in contrast to alphabetic symbols which represent phonemes This volume presents research findings indispensable to the general understanding of human language processing about how people process the Chinese language

Handbook of Natural Language Processing and Machine Translation Joseph Olive,Caitlin Christianson,John McCary,2011-03-02 This comprehensive handbook written by leading experts in the field details the groundbreaking research conducted under the breakthrough GALE program The Global Autonomous Language Exploitation within the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency DARPA while placing it in the context of previous research in the fields of natural language and signal processing artificial intelligence and machine translation The most fundamental contrast between GALE and its predecessor programs was its holistic integration of previously separate or sequential processes. In earlier language research programs each of the individual processes was performed separately and sequentially: speech recognition, language recognition, transcription, translation, and content summarization. The GALE program employed a distinctly new approach by executing these processes simultaneously. Speech and language recognition algorithms now aid translation and transcription processes and vice versa. This combination of previously distinct processes has produced significant research and performance breakthroughs and has fundamentally changed the natural language processing and machine translation fields. This comprehensive handbook provides an exhaustive exploration into these latest technologies in natural language speech and signal processing and machine translation, providing researchers, practitioners, and students with an authoritative reference on the topic.

Cognitive Neuroscience Studies of the Chinese Language Henry S.R. Kao 张其成, Che-Kan Leong, Ding-Guo Gao, 2002-07-01. What are the linguistic constituents and structural components of Chinese characters and words? Does the spoken language provide a basis for reading different writing systems including Chinese? How do the results of current neuroimaging and electrophysiology relate to the processing of Chinese characters and words? This handbook offers a thorough treatment of the science of linguistic annotation. Leaders in the field guide the reader through the process of modeling, creating an annotation language, building a corpus, and evaluating it for correctness. Essential reading for both computer scientists and linguistic researchers. Linguistic annotation is an increasingly important activity in the field of computational linguistics because of its critical role in the development of language models for natural language processing applications. Part one of this book covers all phases of the linguistic annotation process: from annotation scheme design and choice of representation format through both the manual and automatic annotation process, evaluation, and iterative improvement of annotation accuracy. The second part of the book includes case studies of annotation projects across the spectrum of linguistic annotation types, including morpho-syntactic tagging, syntactic analyses, a range of semantic analyses, semantic roles, named entities, sentiment and opinion, time and event, and spatial analyses, and discourse level analyses including discourse structure, coreference, etc. Each case study addresses the various phases and processes discussed in the chapters of part one.
