Language And Representation In Information Retrieval:

Language and Representation in Information Retrieval David C. Blair, 1990 Information or Document Retrieval is the subject of this book It is not an introductory book although it is self contained in the sense that it is not necessary to have a background in the theory or practice of Information Retrieval in order to understand its arguments The book presents as clearly as possible one particular perspective on Information Retrieval and attempts to say that certain aspects of the theory or practice of the management of documents are more important than others The majority of Information Retrieval research has been aimed at the more experimentally tractable small scale systems and although much of that work has added greatly to our understanding of Information Retrieval it is becoming increasingly apparent that retrieval systems with large data bases of documents are a fundamentally different genre of systems than small scale systems If this is so which is the thesis of this book then we must now study large information retrieval systems with the same rigor and intensity that we once studied small scale systems Hegel observed that the quantitative growth of any system caused qualitative changes to take place in its structure and processes

Cross-Language Information Retrieval Jian-Yun Nie, 2022-05-31 Search for information is no longer exclusively limited within the native language of the user but is more and more extended to other languages This gives rise to the problem of cross language information retrieval CLIR whose goal is to find relevant information written in a different language to a query In addition to the problems of monolingual information retrieval IR translation is the key problem in CLIR one should translate either the query or the documents from a language to another However this translation problem is not identical to full text machine translation MT the goal is not to produce a human readable translation but a translation suitable for finding relevant documents Specific translation methods are thus required The goal of this book is to provide a comprehensive description of the specific problems arising in CLIR the solutions proposed in this area as well as the remaining problems The book starts with a general description of the monolingual IR and CLIR problems Different classes of approaches to translation are then presented approaches using an MT system dictionary based translation and approaches based on parallel and comparable corpora In addition the typical retrieval effectiveness using different approaches is compared It will be shown that translation approaches specifically designed for CLIR can rival and outperform high quality MT systems Finally the book offers a look into the future that draws a strong parallel between query expansion in monolingual IR and query translation in CLIR suggesting that many approaches developed in monolingual IR can be adapted to CLIR The book can be used as an introduction to CLIR Advanced readers can also find more technical details and discussions about the remaining research challenges in the future It is suitable to new researchers who intend to carry out research on CLIR Table of Contents Preface Introduction Using Manually Constructed Translation Systems and Resources for CLIR Translation Based on Parallel and Comparable Corpora Other Methods to Improve CLIR A Look into the Future Toward a Unified View of Monolingual IR and CLIR References Author Biography future The rapid growth of information and communication technology as well as progress in educational psychological and allied research fields have many scholars questioning aspects of traditional school concepts For example should the classroom be flipped so that students receive instruction online at home and do homework in school At the same time inclusive education has changed the traditional landscape of special education and thus of deaf education in many if not all countries and yet deaf children continued to lag significantly behind hearing peers in academic achievement As a consequence of technological innovations e g digital hearing aids and early bilateral cochlear implants the needs of many deaf learners have changed considerably Parents and professionals however are just now coming to recognize that there are cognitive experiential and social emotional differences between deaf and hearing students likely to affect academic outcomes Understanding such differences and determining ways in which to accommodate them through global cooperation must become a top priority in educating deaf learners Through the participation of an international interdisciplinary set of scholars Educating Deaf Learners takes a broader view of learning and academic achievement than any previous work considering the whole child In adopting this broad perspective the authors capture the complexities and commonalities in the social emotional cognitive and linguistic mosaic of which the deaf child is a part It is only through such a holistic consideration that we can understand their academic potential

Multilingual Information Retrieval Carol Peters, Martin Braschler, Paul Clough, 2012-01-05 We are living in a multilingual world and the diversity in languages which are used to interact with information access systems has generated a wide variety of challenges to be addressed by computer and information scientists The growing amount of non English information accessible globally and the increased worldwide exposure of enterprises also necessitates the adaptation of Information Retrieval IR methods to new multilingual settings Peters Braschler and Clough present a comprehensive description of the technologies involved in designing and developing systems for Multilingual Information Retrieval MLIR They provide readers with broad coverage of the various issues involved in creating systems to make accessible digitally stored materials regardless of the language s they are written in Details on Cross Language Information Retrieval CLIR are also covered that help readers to understand how to develop retrieval systems that cross language boundaries Their work is divided into six chapters and accompanies the reader step by step through the various stages involved in building using and evaluating MLIR systems The book concludes with some examples of recent applications that utilise MLIR technologies Some of the techniques described have recently started to appear in commercial search systems while others have the potential to be part of future incarnations The book is intended for graduate students scholars and practitioners with a basic understanding of classical text retrieval methods It offers guidelines and information on all aspects that need to be taken into consideration when building MLIR systems while avoiding too many hands on details that could rapidly become obsolete Thus it bridges the gap between the material covered by most of the classical IR textbooks and the novel requirements related to the acquisition and dissemination of information in whatever language it is stored
