Mail Order Retailing in Britain Richard Coopey, Sean O'Connell, Dilwyn Porter, 2005-01-27 Since its inception in the late 19th century Britain's mail order industry both exploited and generated social networks in building its businesses The common foundation of the sector was the agency system Sales were made through catalogues held by agents ordinary people in families neighbourhoods pubs clubs and workplaces Through this agency system mail order firms in Britain were able to tap social networks both to build a customer base but also to obtain vital information on creditworthiness In this the first comprehensive history of the British mail order industry the authors combine business and social history to fully explain the features and workings of this industry They show how British general mail order industry firms such as Kay and Co Empire Stores Littlewoods and Grattan grew from a range of businesses as diverse as watch sales or football pools A range of business innovations and strategies were developed throughout the twentieth century including technological development and labour process rationalisation Indeed the sector was in the vanguard of many aspects of change from supply chain logistics to computerization The social and gender profile of the home shopper also changed markedly as the industry developed These changes are charted from the male dominated origins of the industry to the growing influence of women both within the firm and more importantly as the centre of the mail order market The book also draws parallels and contrasts with the much more widely studied mail order industry of the United States The final section of the book examines the rise of internet shopping and the new challenges and opportunities it provided for the mail order industry Here the story is one of continuity and fracture as the established mail order companies struggle to adjust to a business environment which they had partly created but which also rested on a new range of core competencies and technological and demographic change

Bookseller & Stationer, 1903 The Advertising Age and Mail Order Journal, 1916 The Market Makers Peter Scott, 2017-09-15 During the twentieth century affluence both at the level of the individual household and that of society as a whole became intimately linked with access to a range of prestige consumer durables The Market Makers charts the inter war origins of a process that would eventually transform these features of modern life from being luxuries to necessities for most British families Peter Scott examines how producers and retailers succeeded in creating mass though not universal market for new suites of furniture radios modern housing and some electrical and gas appliances while also exploring why some other goods such as refrigerators telephones and automobiles failed to reach the mass market in Britain before the 1950s Creating mass markets presented a formidable challenge for manufacturers and retailers Consumer durables required large markets Most involved significant research and development costs Some such as the telephone radio and car were dependent on complementary investments in infrastructure All required intensive marketing usually including expensive advertising in national newspapers and magazines while some also needed mass production methods and output volumes to make them affordable to a mass market This study charts the pioneering efforts of entrepreneurs many of whom though once household names are now largely forgotten to provide consumer durables at a price affordable to a mass market and to persuade a sometimes reluctant public to embrace the new products and the consumer credit that their purchase required In doing so Scott shows that contrary to much received wisdom there was a consumer durables revolution in inter war Britain at least for certain highly prioritised goods
