ARCHITECTURE

FAST FACTS

- The Great Pyramid is the largest limestone building in the world. When first built, the structure stood 481 feet (147 meters) tall, as tall as a 48-story building.
- The Great Pyramid has lost 30 feet (9 meters) off the top since the pyramids were built primarily as tombs for pharaohs.
- Historians think that it took 20,000 workers between 10 and 20 years to build the Great Pyramid.
- Construction on a pharaoh's tomb began when he took office and continued until he died. The pharaoh's life was a journey.

ABOUT ARCHITECTURE

Every day we learn about what they believed about the world. Many of these beliefs are still with us today.

Some people did not believe in the afterlife. They thought that life was just a long dream.

Some people think that the construction of the pyramids required a technology that was lost to time and that we could not build them today. It is hard to believe, but very few modern cities would be strong enough to move the blocks of heavy limestone that form the pyramids. The Egyptians did not use mortar to hold the stones together. They used only mud, and the stones were so perfectly fitted together so perfectly that you could not insert a knife blade between two of them.

The first type of pyramid the Egyptians built was a style called step pyramid. Step pyramids were made of mud bricks. The sides of step pyramids were not straight. They were like a series of smaller pyramids that would come later. They were like giant steps, and were therefore called step pyramids.

They built other structures as well. One was a temple, or large building with carvings that stood at the entrance of a temple. The other was an obelisk, which was a tall, thin column, which was wider at the base. They were the entrance of a temple, and an ancient "message" carved with the religious words. They were like giant steps, and were therefore called step pyramids.
