

PHET Magnetism - Lab Guide

Part 1

Today you will be exploring magnets and electromagnets through a simulation provided by the University of Colorado at Boulder.

1. Click "understanding" under "resources" (see: "Magnetism and Electromagnetism." Below this link: Magnetism and Electromagnetism.)

2. Move the compass slowly along a circle around the bar magnet until you reach the other opposite labeled surface magnet. Observe what happens to the compass needle.

The compass has the ability to give you information about direction. It is often used to indicate where geographic north is. There is true north and it is marked on the map. The compass points toward a point known as magnetic. This is called a magnetic pole.

3. When the bar magnet the compass needle starts off, what does the needle tell you?

It would be like the magnet attracts compass and is repels.

4. How is the strength of the force of the bar magnet and the compass needle related?

It is approximately a perpendicular distance.

5. What are the similarities between the compass needle (magnetized) and a bar magnet (permanent)?

We know that both attract things, repels other, and when they're separated, they have a magnetic force that pulls them back into a perpendicular position.

6. Move the compass along a circular path below the bar magnet until you're back at the opposite side of the bar magnet. Observe what happens to the compass needle.

When you're at the bar magnet, the compass needle is pointing towards the bar magnet. As you move away from the bar magnet, the compass needle starts to turn. It starts to turn away from the bar magnet and it starts to turn away from the bar magnet.
