Solomon brings the story up to date with afterwords detailing such recent developments as GE's revolutionary Evolution locomotives and EMD's SD70ACe and SD70M-2. From General Electric's electrical legends the Pennsylvania Railroad's E44s, Amtrak's E60s and Milwaukee Road's Little Joes to EMD's mid-century F-units, workhorse GP and SD locomotives and Dash series all the way through to the rivals' most cutting-edge modern green designs, GE and EMD Locomotives: The Illustrated History leaves nothing unexamined in the important histories of these industrial giants and the competition that continues to drive them forward.

Service Department, 1970 An Illustrated Guide to Modern Trains John Brian Hollingsworth, 1985 Extra Twenty-two Hundred South, 1982 Cross Talk between Lymph Node Lymphatic Endothelial Cells and T Cells in Inflammation and Cancer Sonia Elhadad, Silvia Della Bella, 2017-12-06

Lymphocytes constantly survey the lymph nodes in search for potential infection by a pathogen. They enter the afferent lymphatic vessel that serves as a conduit to transport the motile lymphocytes to the draining lymph node. Lymphatic vessels (LVs) are present in most vascularized tissues. They are traditionally regarded as passive conduits for soluble antigens and leukocytes. Afferent LVs begin as blind-ended capillaries which give rise to collecting vessels that merge and connect with draining lymph nodes (dLNs). Initial lymphatic capillaries are composed of Lymphatic Endothelial Cells (LECs) connected by discontinuous cell junctions which join to form larger collecting lymphatic vessels and ultimately feed into the LN subcapsular sinus. Within the LN, LECs are localized to the subcapsular cortical and medullary sinuses where they interact with incoming and exiting leukocytes. LECs and, in general, LN stromal cells have emerged in the recent years as active players in the immune response. In support of this, studies have shown that the immune response generated during inflammation and under pathologic conditions is accompanied by modeling of the LVs and generation of new lymphatics, a process known as lymphangiogenesis. These facts strongly suggest that LECs and stromal LN cells, in general, are not inert players but rather are part of the immune response by organizing immune cells' movement, exchanging information and supplying survival factors. The purpose of this research topic is to review the role of the LECs during immune homeostasis and cancer. Considering the critical role of lymphangiogenesis in many pathologies like chronic and acute inflammation, autoimmunity, wound healing, graft rejection, and tumor metastasis, it is important to understand the molecular mechanisms that govern the cross-talks between the LECs and immune cells during homeostasis and inflammation.
