A Hundred And Seventy Chinese Poems Various, A Hundred And Seventy Chinese Poems Certain elements are found but in varying degree in all human speech It is difficult to conceive of a language in which rhyme stress accent and tone accent would not to some extent occur In all languages some vowel sounds are shorter than others and in certain cases two consecutive words begin with the same sound Other such characteristics could be enumerated but for the purposes of poetry it is these elements which man has principally exploited English poetry has used chiefly rhyme stress and alliteration It is doubtful if tone has ever played a part a conscious use has sporadically been made of quantity Poetry naturally utilizes the most marked and definite characteristics of the language in which it is written Such characteristics are used consciously by the poet but less important elements also play their part often only in a negative way Thus the Japanese actually avoid rhyme the Greeks did not exploit it but seem to have tolerated it when it occurred accidentally The expedients consciously used by the Chinese before the sixth century were rhyme and length of line A third element inherent in the language was not exploited before that date but must always have been a factor in instinctive considerations of euphony This element was tone Chinese prosody distinguishes between two tones a flat and a deflected In the first the syllable is enunciated in a level manner the voice neither rises nor sinks In the second it 1 rises 2 sinks 3 is abruptly arrested These varieties make up the Four Tones of Classical Chinese The deflected tones are distinctly more emphatic and so have a faint analogy to our stressed syllables They are also in an even more remote way analogous to the long vowels of Latin prosody A line ending with a level has consequently to some extent the effect of a feminine ending Certain causes which I need not specify here led to an increasing importance of tone in the Chinese language from the fifth century onwards It was natural that this change should be reflected in Chinese prosody A certain Sh n Yo a d 441 513 first propounded the laws of tone succession in poetry From that time till the eighth century the L shih or strictly regulated poem gradually evolved But poets continued and continue till to day side by side with their l shih to write in the old metre which disregards tone calling such poems Ku shih old poems Previous European statements about Chinese prosody should be accepted with great caution Writers have attempted to define the l shih with far too great precision
