Women, Gender and Everyday Social Transformation in India Kenneth Bo Nielsen, Anne Waldrop, 2014-08-01 The pace of socioeconomic transformation in India over the past two and a half decades has been formidable. This volume sheds light on how these transformations have played out at the level of everyday life to influence the lives of Indian women and gender relations more broadly. Through ethnographically grounded case studies, the authors portray the contradictory and contested co-existence of discrepant gendered norms, values and visions in a society caught up in wider processes of sociopolitical change. Women, Gender and Everyday Social Transformation in India moves the debate on gender and social transformation into the domain of everyday life to arrive at locally embedded and detailed ethnographically informed analyses of gender relations in real life contexts that foreground both subtle and not so subtle negotiations and contestations South Asia and its Others

Atreyee Phukan, V.G. Julie Rajan, 2020-10-27 The essays in South Asia and Its Others: Reading the Exotic reveal fresh perspectives on the notion of exoticism in South Asia and also challenge and extend existing scholarship in the broader discourse of what constitutes South Asia. Significantly, the anthology considers how the phenomenon of exoticization may be interpreted as a strategic methodology utilized by writers of South Asian descent to examine critically both the post-colonialist ramifications of casteism, religious intolerance and gender violence across differing cultural contexts within the region and how current perceptions of native and diasporic South Asian subjects problematize ideologies of authenticity across Western Eastern divides. The papers in this collection show how authors of South Asian ethnicity construct their own version of an exotic South Asia globally and the colonialist discourse of exoticism is employed as a discursive tool that uncovers the ambiguity that continues to mark the marginality of identities even today The Pharmacology of the Newer Materia Medica ,1892 India News Bulletin ,1955 Tourism and Poverty Regina Scheyvens, 2012-03-28

8 Conclusion Marine Algal Bloom: Characteristics, Causes and Climate Change Impacts

Santosh Kumar Sarkar, 2018-05-02 In the marine environment, single-celled microscopic plant-like organisms naturally occur in the well-lit surface layer of any body of water. These organisms, referred to as phytoplankton or microalgae, form the base of the food web upon which nearly all other marine organisms depend. Algal bloom is a rapid increase in or accumulation of the population of about 300 species of algae due to excess nutrients, eutrophication and is of major global interest as it causes reduction in species diversity, abrupt changes in water quality and discoloration of the water (green, yellow, brown or red) depending on the species of algae and the type of pigments they contain. Dying blooms can also be an environmental concern as when the cells sink and decay, bacteria break down the organic material which in turn strips oxygen from the water. This microbial oxygen demand at times leads to very low oxygen levels in the bottom waters, harming aquatic life. Documentation of this sporadic high abundance of algae together with the significant species richness of the diatoms requires comprehensive studies in the Sundarban coastal environment which is facing severe degradation due to natural anthropogenic stressors. In addition, a better understanding of the effects of algal blooms on seafood quality, the complex biological, chemical and physical interactions and subsequent effects on trophodynamics is needed to develop strategies for effective coastal zone management. The book discusses the occurrence of harmful algal blooms (HABs) caused by the dinoflagellates of the genus Alexandrium and Karenia or diatoms of the genus Pseudo nitzschia which have large and varied impacts on marine ecosystems such as large scale marine mortality events that have been associated with various types of shellfish poisonings depending on the species involved, the environment where they are found and the mechanism by which they exert negative effects. HABs represent a major environmental problem in all regions of the U S and their occurrence is on the rise due to increased nutrient pollution. HABs have severe impacts on human health, aquatic ecosystems and the economy. Such blooms, known colloquially as red tides due to their red or brown hues, are increasing in frequency and magnitude worldwide as a result of changes in oceanic climate, increased coastal eutrophication and enhanced long distance dispersal in ballast water. As such, the book offers an in depth account of the complex biological, chemical and physical interactions of the algal blooms, both innocuous and harmful ones. It also discusses the highly topical issue of the impact of global climate change on the frequency and severity of HABs in the context of alterations in temperature stratification, light and ocean acidification. Focusing on both basic and applied limnology, this book is a reliable and up to date reference resource for students, teachers and researchers engaged in the field of coastal research management at regional and global scales.
